

This image is a vertical, high-contrast, black and white scan. It depicts a textured surface, likely a book cover or a piece of aged paper. The central area is light gray with a grainy texture. A prominent, dark, irregular vertical border runs along the right side of the image. At the top, there is a small, dark, rectangular object that appears to be a piece of tape or a binding element. The overall appearance is that of a low-quality, high-contrast scan of a physical object.

conscious of all this. She was blissfully happy. Her new clothes gave her the delight which a child feels in a new gown. She believed herself quite fitted now to enter the queen's drawing room if need be, and Philip, who saw her eyes and ears scanning her gown, her jacket or her gloves with eager, pleased eyes, felt his heart stir in its breast with the consciousness of all his pain and mortification which lay before them both. All this, however, he did not dream of. He was too busy with his warm fond heart. Had he done so he would have taken her and fled to the darkest corner of the world. It was not for him, weak as he may have seemed in many things.
